

HBA of St. Louis & Eastern Missouri Members Who Have Completed the “EPA Lead Safety Certification Course for Renovation, Repair and Painting (RRP) via Training at the HBA

Contractors that work in pre-1978 housing run the biggest risk of disturbing large amounts of lead paint and creating lead dust. On April 22, 2010, the EPA implemented the Lead Paint Renovation, Repair and Painting (RRP) Rule. This rule requires any contractor that disturbs painted and sealed surfaces in pre-1978 homes to have at least one employee earn the Certified Lead Renovator designation. The rule also requires the company to become a Lead-Safe Certified Renovator.

This list below shows all current HBA member companies that trained employees through classes (conducted by Titan Environmental Services) at the HBA in order to earn the Certified Lead Renovator designation. It's possible that other HBA members trained their employees through other means to comply with the EPA's RRP Rule. Before you sign any contract documents for work to be performed on pre-1978 projects, be sure to ask the contractor to produce the proper credentials for their employees and their firm.
